Workplace fatalities hit 30-year high

60 deaths in 2012. Province's labour minister says focus of tougher legislation is construction industry

ALYSSA MCDONALD
alyssa.mcdonald@metronews.ca

Despite the rate of workplace injuries dropping in Saskatchewan, the number of workers killed on the job in the province has reached a 30-year high.

The Saskatchewan Workers' Compensation Board (WCB) reported on Tuesday that there were 60 workplace deaths last year, almost double the number of fatalities in 2011.

"Our initial reaction is one of just pure disappointment," said Phillip Germain, vice-president of prevention and employer services with WCB.

"At the end of the day, it is unacceptable.... We truly believe injuries and fatalities are both predictable and preventable."

Of those deaths, construction-related tragedies — 14 of them last year — contributed to the most industry claims. As well, 11 of the deaths are described as "traumatic," meaning a sudden fatality due to a fall, being crushed or being struck by something.

Don Morgan, minister responsible for labour relations and workplace safety, said the province is ramping up enforcement with new labour legislation that will bring stiffer penalties, including higher fines and prosecution, for insufficient fall protection.

"We know the areas that we want to focus on is construction areas," said Morgan. "Falls, ditches and the type of things (that result) in traumatic injuries."

Youth deaths on the job significantly increased from none to five in the past two years, all of which were due to motor-vehicle crashes. Ten adults were injured in vehicle accidents at work.

Morgan said the government is looking at ways to decrease all vehicle accidents. He noted the government can't prevent some deaths, including heart attacks, which claimed 15 lives on the job, or fatalities caused by occupational disease — such as past exposure to asbestos — that led to 19 deaths in 2012.

During the next couple of years, WCB said it is expecting a high number of deaths related to past asbestos exposure.

Will weather put a damper on Junos?

Look ahead. Regina host committee doesn't seem concerned

jeff.mackey@metronews.ca

Nothing spoils a party quite like bad weather.

In less than two weeks the Juno Awards will have Regina playing host to many of Canada's top music celebrities and recording-industry brass.

But when the country's eyes turn to Regina, what will they see?

This past winter in Regina has been virtually unprecedented. The city has surpassed decades-old snowfall records and it broke a cold-temperature record on Tuesday, while the province is forecasting a possible record spring run-off.

The Junos host committee isn't worried that the cold and snow will deter people from attending the big show, or the Juno Week of events preceding it — some of which will take place outdoors.

"Saskatchewan music fans are a hearty bunch," said Randy Jeworski, chairman of the Junos committee for venues and logistics. "People are brave, looking to get outside, and all we need is plus-1 C or 2 C and I am sure they will be out in masses."

An outdoor concert venue in City Square Plaza is being assembled, despite the sub-zero temperatures.

The cold weather, however, isn't all the Junos will have to deal with. In fact, if it warms up quickly, the city could very well deal with spring run-off or even flooding.

"You could ask for a big system that draws up lots of warm air from the States, but on the other hand you also want a slow snow melt (to avoid flooding)," said John Paul Cragg, a meteorologist with Environment Canada.

Still, the host committee seems sure that the weather will not affect the party.

"We won't have any flood issues for any of the Juno venues," said Jeworski.

Health region

Centralized pediatric care considered

Pediatric care in Regina could be consolidated into one medical facility from the two hospitals where it's currently carried out.

The Regina Qu'Appelle Health Region is considering a merger of in-patient children's services, putting all of them in Regina General Hospital and removing them from Pasqua Hospital.

The possible move, based on low patient occupancy at both hospitals, will continue to be studied before a plan is presented to the health region's board by the end of June.

Funding

Province doubles investment in Habitat homes

Saskatchewan Habitat for Humanity is getting a jump in funding for the next year, giving 40 families the opportunity to own a home.

Habitat will receive $2 million from the province, a doubling of the government's funding in one of the organization's biggest percentage increases across Canada.

"It gives you a feeling of community. ... It's about who we are as a province," said June Draude, minister of social services.

Of the lump sum, $50,000 will go to each house being built. Another $100,000 in funding comes from organization and group support. METRO

Bullying. International Day of Pink gets off to early start in Regina

About 1,000 students turned out to the Turvey Centre in North Regina on Tuesday for a Day of Pink rally against bullying.

The students, many of whom were decked out in pink, learned about the issues surrounding bullying as well as the history of the International Day of Pink, which takes place Wednesday.

"We are trying to inspire them, show them that they are capable of changing the world," said Travis Price, one of the founders of Day of Pink. "It's about showing them the power that they do have and that when they use their voice and act (against bullying), good things will happen." JEFF MACKEY/METRO

Lotto Max. Couple $21M richer

A Regina couple has struck it rich with a $21-million lottery jackpot.

Scott and Linda Sinclair are the winners of the Lotto Max prize for a draw that was held last summer.

"I really enjoy dreaming about a big win, but I never thought it would actually happen," Scott said Tuesday in a release issued by Western Canada Lottery Corp.

Despite the draw being held last July 13, Scott waited until recent weeks to look closely at the ticket that he had purchased at a Regina convenience store.

"He just had it sitting around," WCLC spokeswoman Andrea Marantz said from Winnipeg.

"And every once in a while, he'd think about it."

Following the Sinclairs' shock at the size of their windfall, they've had life and work decisions to make.

"I think she has retired now. She had been working — until she discovered the win, anyway," Marantz said of Linda, adding that she wasn't sure of the couple's occupations.

"They were overwhelmed with the money and hadn't really thought about specific plans."

The couple did not make themselves available directly for comment.

Crime ring. Alleged teen pimps documented crimes in photos: Crown

Sexually explicit photos of teenage girls — one as young as 13 — were described in detail in an Ottawa courtroom Tuesday as a month-long trial into a teen prostitution ring entered its second day.

The photos, retrieved from a cellphone found on one of the three accused, show 10 girls ranging in age from 13 to 18 in compromising positions. One girl appeared to be stripped of her clothing, passed out in a bathtub.

According to Crown lawyers, some photos were sent to prospective johns. Four girls were allegedly pimped out and forced into sex. Three were minors at the time.

Three teen girls are facing charges of human trafficking, forcible confinement, assault, robbery and uttering threats to one complainant, stemming from May 2012 events.

Road safety. Ontario truck-maker says it will install side guards

New Democrat MP Olivia Chow says Canada is a step closer to safer roads after Ontario truck manufacturer Shu-Pak Equipment Inc. agreed to put side guards on all its new vehicles. But she says it's still not enough.

The NDP transportation critic has renewed her calls for the federal government to implement a private member's bill she introduced in the House of Commons to make side guards mandatory on heavy trucks in Canada.

It follows the deaths of several cyclists who died beneath the wheels of big trucks in Toronto and elsewhere.

Bullying victim. Rehtaeh Parsons, 17, killed herself after months of abuse

HALEY RYAN

Sitting on the couch in her living room, Leah Parsons gathered a blanket around her legs and looked around at the photos of her daughter lining the walls.

"Rehtaeh's everywhere here," Parsons said with a sad smile.

Rehtaeh Parsons, 17, died in hospital Sunday, several days after hanging herself following months of bullying and victimization stemming from a fall night in 2011 when her mother says she was raped by four boys.

"She was a very busy, head-strong girl," Parsons said in the Cole Harbour, N.S., home she shares with her partner, Jason, and where Rehtaeh grew up.

In her younger years, Parsons said Rehtaeh was a straight-A student who couldn't get enough of books and learning, and wanted to be a marine activist.

On that November night two years ago, Parsons said Rehtaeh had been at a friend's house when the alleged assault occurred. Her daughter remembered being led upstairs by one of the boys, but not much else after that, until she heard the click of a photo being taken.

A few days later, one of the boys sent out the photo via text, and when Rehtaeh walked into the Cole Harbour High School everyone started calling her a "slut."

"She never could go back to that school again," Parsons said. "They turned against her."

They reported the alleged sexual assault to police, but charges were never laid and the investigation took about a year to complete.

"It could have been handled a lot differently," Parsons said.

Court reduces sentences of two torturers

Ontario's top court has lowered the sentences of a Hamilton couple who held a developmentally disabled man captive and tortured him while draining his bank account to buy drugs and video-game equipment.

Dakota Thompson and Stanley Brown were part of a group convicted of aggravated assault and forcible confinement for inflicting horrific injuries on a 23-year-old disabled man over more than two weeks in 2009.

Brown was originally sentenced to 13 years — nearly double the sentence the defence and Crown had jointly suggested — and Thompson was sentenced to 10 years, which was also far more than the Crown had recommended.

The Appeal Court sentenced Brown to serve seven years and two months and Thompson to six years and eight months. With credit for pre-trial custody and the time they have already served in prison, they would be eligible to apply for parole in about a year.

Student stabbing spree ends in suspect's arrest

Cypress, Texas.

At least 14 injured as suspect stalked from building to building

A student went on a mass stabbing assault at a Texas community college Tuesday, wounding at least 14 people — many in the face and neck — before being subdued and arrested, authorities and witnesses said.

The attack at about 11:20 a.m. on the Lone Star Community College System's campus in Cypress sent at least 12 people to hospital, while several others refused treatment at the scene, according to Cy-Fair Volunteer Fire Department spokesman Robert Rasa.

Two people remained in critical condition Tuesday evening at Memorial Hermann-Texas Medical Center, spokeswoman Alex Rodriguez said.

Diante Cotton, 20, said he was sitting in a cafeteria with some friends when a girl clutching her neck walked in, yelling, "He's stabbing people! He's stabbing people!"

Cotton said he could not see the girl's injuries, but when he and his friends went outside, they saw a half-dozen people with injuries to their faces and necks being loaded into ambu-

Harris County Sheriff Adrian Garcia said there were indications when calls came in to the department that "students or faculty were actively responding to work to subdue this individual."

"So we're proud of those folks but we're glad no one else is injured any more severely than they are," Garcia said.

Student Michael Chalfan said he was walking to class when he saw a group of police officers also running after the suspect. He said one officer used a stun gun to help subdue the man. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Serbia. Gunman kills 13 in their beds, at doorsteps

Serbia awash in guns

The wars from 1991 to 1999 as Yugoslavia broke up left much of the region traumatized and heavily armed.

- Weapons owned by civilians have caused fatalities every week, as traumatized former soldiers shoot family or commit suicide or kids find guns at home.

- Serbia has about three million weapons owned by civilians, according to the Small Arms Survey, a Swiss NGO. It says Serbia has the fifth-highest number of weapons per capita in the world, with some 38 guns for every 100 people.

He went from house to house in the village at dawn, gunning down his mother, his son, a two-year-old cousin and 10 other neighbours. Residents said if a police patrol car hadn't shown up, they all would have been dead.

Police said they had no motive yet for the carnage that left six men, six women and a child dead Tuesday in Velika Ivanca, a Serbian village 50 kilometres southeast of Belgrade.

"Most of the victims were shot while they were asleep," Serbian police chief Milorad Veljovic told reporters.

After the rampage, police said suspect Ljubisa Bogdanovic, 60, turned his gun on himself and his wife as authorities closed in. Both were in grave condition at hospital.

"He knocked on the doors, and as they were opened he just fired a shot," said villager Radovan Radosavljevic. "He was a good neighbour, and anyone would open their doors to him."

The suspect's older brother Radmilo was unable to explain why the massacre happened.

"As a child, he was a frightened little boy," he said. "He couldn't even slaughter a chicken."

But he said his brother changed after serving in the army during a brutal Serb-led offensive against the Croatian town of Vukovar in 1992.

Margaret Thatcher — divisive even in death

Graffiti adorns a wall in west Belfast, Northern Ireland, on Tuesday. While some Britons mourned the death of former prime minister Margaret Thatcher, others raised glasses of champagne at impromptu street parties. And the song Ding Dong! The Witch is Dead from The Wizard of Oz is surging up the U.K. singles charts. Thatcher was an unusually divisive figure blamed by many for crippling Britain's labour unions and sabotaging workers' rights. South Africans also passionately debated whether Thatcher helped or hindered the cruel system of white rule. Many leaders, however, were quick to share their praise and admiration for Thatcher — Stephen Harper will attend her funeral, scheduled for April 17 in London, as will Queen Elizabeth.

TWEEZING OUT THE FAKERS

We are not alone.

We just haven't noticed yet.

That's one conclusion you could draw from the latest breathless alien disclosure.

The so-called "Atacama Humanoid," so-called because it was allegedly found in the Atacama Desert of Chile, and is only six-inches tall. Talk about your "little" green man. Easy to overlook.

A full close-up is promised on April 22 when a "documentary" called Sirius premieres in Hollywood.

There's the first clue.

In the trailer, Atacama Humanoid is featured at his (her?) own autopsy, along with a lot of the usual stuff about how the presence of aliens and their cool technology on Earth has been suppressed by the oil industry, large corporations and financial interests, blah, blah. Why is it these guys always suppress cool technologies but somehow adopt loser technologies like electric cars,

JUST SAYIN'

Paul Sullivan

solar power and wind? (Elementary, my dear Watson. Precisely because they don't work.)

The trailer for Sirius is causing a fair amount of fringe media fuss because of the autopsy scenes and an X-ray of Atacama Humanoid, which reveals an anatomically plausible skeleton. In the autopsy shot, it appears that someone is extracting Atacama's brain from the back of his tiny skull. Either that or it's a note that says "Fooled you again, sucker."

The man behind these shenanigans, er, proceedings is Dr. Steven Greer, a former emergency room medical doctor, who claims to have attracted the highest documentary crowd-funding raise in history. (See "sucker"

Dr. Greer is the self-declared world's leading authority on extraterrestrials and has founded more centres and projects than you can shake a stick at. There's another clue: real scientists don't need to create their own centres and projects. That's what universities are for.

Sadly, even though we're doomed to be disappointed — ah-gain — the Internet is abuzz with a desperate hope that this time, ET really has come to call. I mean, this guy Greer is a real doctor, so he says, and the former chairman of a real emergency department in North Carolina.

But this is hardly his first "disclosure." He's been disclosing the truth about aliens since at least 1993. Funny; until now nobody has paid any attention.

Maybe Dr. Greer is a victim of Short Alien Syndrome. It's hard to take seriously an alien autopsy performed with tweezers.

Remember too, that this is not the first alien autopsy: that was the 1995 faux broadcast Alien Autopsy: (Fact or Fiction?) It turned out to be the latter. At least that fake alien was bigger than a breadbox.

So, fellow ET buffs, be prepared to have your faith shattered, yet again. I fear we're the victims of an Earth-bound conspiracy: nasty, brutish ... and short.

How did you manage to take this striking photograph?
I used a specific homemade floating perch for the camera to rest on, and a remote control transmission linked to the camera in a water housing. It's not exactly the most standard of equipment but it worked. It seems a very tricky shot to take, with the frogs normally being averse to such frigid conditions.

What were the challenges?
They seemed to be fascinated with the shiny dome of the camera lens. Every time they came into contact with it, I had to clean the glass and wait all over again for the frogs to be in the right spot.

New movie. The latest Jackie Robinson movie looks at how one executive helped the famed ball player break colour barriers

IN FOCUS
Richard Crouse
scene@metronews.ca

Each year on April 15 Major League Baseball pays tribute to Jackie Robinson.

The second baseman is remembered not only as a veteran of six World Series, the recipient of the inaugural MLB Rookie of the Year Award in 1947 and an inductee into the Baseball Hall of Fame but especially as the first African American man to play in Major League Baseball in the modern era.

His accomplishments are many. He was the first black player to win the National League Most Valuable Player Award and was awarded both the Presidential Medal of Freedom and the Congressional Gold Medal.

Long story short...

The film focuses on Robinson's (Chadwick Boseman) relationship with Branch Rickey, played by Harrison Ford, the MLB executive who facilitated the player's signing to the ball team.

Chadwick Boseman stars as Jackie Robinson in 42, the latest tribute to the famed baseball player. HANDOUT

In tribute, every April 15, the date the Brooklyn Dodgers started Robinson at first base, all uniformed personnel at 15 different ballparks wear Jackie's retired number 42.

This weekend a tribute of another kind comes to theatres. The movie 42 details the Hall of Famer's history-making breaking of the colour barrier in professional baseball. The film focuses on Robinson's (Chadwick Boseman) relationship with Branch Rickey, played by Harrison Ford, the MLB executive who facilitated the player's signing to the ball team.

The story is custom-made for the movies. Spike Lee tried unsuccessfully to get a biopic of Robinson, starring Denzel Washington, off the ground in 1995, but others have had better luck.

Robinson portrayed himself in The Jackie Robinson Story. Filmed over the winter of 1949, during the off-season from the Brooklyn Dodgers, the film earned good reviews at the time, with the New York Times saying, "Mr. Robinson displays a calm assurance and composure that might be envied by many a Hollywood star."

Despite his acclaimed performance, he never made another film.

Since then he has been the subject of a variety of projects.

A 1978 ABC after-school special called A Home Run for Love used the player — portrayed by John Lafayette — as the heart of a tale about friendship and racial tolerance.

The First was a short-lived

Broadway musical starring David Alan Grier as Robinson, and both Andre Braugher and Blair Underwood have played him in television dramas.

Back on the big screen Robinson was played by Keith David in Blue in the Face, an improvised love letter to Brooklyn featuring celebrity cameos by everyone from Harvey Keitel and Lily Tomlin to Madonna and Lou Reed. In a cameo we see Robinson from behind as he talks about breaking the colour barrier in baseball.

The soap opera between Chris Brown and Rihanna continues: The on-again, off-again couple with the rocky past has reportedly called it quits, according to E! News.

While Brown has been spotted in New York entertaining a mystery blond, Rihanna has been finishing up her latest international tour and spending time in L.A. between gigs, but sources say there's no new man in her life and that she's shifting her focus off her love life and onto planning future tours and launching a new fragrance line. METRO WORLD NEWS

Bynes vs. the press: Round 2

Amanda Bynes takes issue with Page Six's story earlier this week that her erratic behaviour during a gymnastics class got her booted. "I'm suing every blog saying I was kicked out of gymnastics," Bynes posted on Twitter. "What is wrong with you people? What would you do if you found fake stories about you?" Also, to make good on her earlier request that online outlets only use photos from her Twitter account and not unflattering paparazzi shots when reporting on her, Bynes posted a slew of photos from the last few years to Twitter, noting which ones are her favourites.

A-Team sues over trademark infringement

Liam Neeson and Bradley Cooper are suing a pair of companies for allegedly using photos of the A-Team co-stars in advertisements without their permission, according to court documents procured by E! News.

Neeson and Cooper claim Vutec Corporations and First Impressions Theme Theaters are guilty of trademark infringement, negligence and violating their rights of privacy and publicity for using their images in print and online ads and in other promotional materials.

The suit was filed in Los Angeles Superior Court. The actors are seeking damages and attorney fees.

I thought I was kind of past the point where this could be a reality for me. So it's been a big surprise and the most wonderful (one)." While reports have claimed that Berry is expecting a boy, she's playing coy about gender, saying only, "I don't know, I don't know."

Sweat and sand

It's easy to see why Huntington Beach is known as Surf City USA. Wet suit-clad pedestrians — surfboards tucked under their arms — are as common a sight as shopping bags and Starbucks coffee cups. A four-block radius located on the Pacific Coast Highway (PCH) and Main Street sets the scene for this city, but there are nearly 13 kilometres of sand to play in.

Start your day with breakfast at Michelle's Sugar Shack Café (hbsugarshack.com) on Main Street, before heading to the International Surfing Museum (surfingmuseum.org). It opens according to surf time. Translation? That's 11 a.m. or noon, unless wave conditions are too good to ignore. If it's closed you can still check out the names of those honoured along the Surfing Walk of Fame at Main and the PCH, including musician Dick Dale for adding to board culture.

Spend your afternoon playing beach volleyball or catching waves along the beach. Stroll along the historic Huntington Beach pier that juts into the Pacific. At its end is Ruby's Diner, a 1950s-inspired local restaurant chain. Before nightfall, stake out one of the fire pits located on the beach for an evening spent sitting on the sand and listening to the surf break on the shore (huntingtonbeachca.gov).

Shop and sip

Located south of Huntington along the PCH are Newport Beach and artsy Laguna Beach. While Fashion Island (shopfashionisland.com) is home to big brand stores, Laguna's downtown features a number of smaller shops, showcasing local artists and handcrafted goods, all set against a backdrop of green hills (lagunabeachinfo.com).

No afternoon is complete without sipping a cool cocktail at The Cliff (thecliffrestaurant.com). Offering a 180-degree view of the ocean, you can sit on the patio and watch sunning locals on the beach metres below, or scan the big blue for passing whales. You can also grab a cool authentic treat at Gelato Paradiso (gelatoparadiso.net) in Peppertree Lane and take a stroll in Heisler Park located high on the bluffs above the Pacific. The popular Las Brisas (lasbrisaslagunabeach.com), with its beckoning margaritas menu, offers a fusion of Californian and traditional Mexican cuisine, with fresh seafood offered each day. The building the restaurant is located in started life as the Victor Hugo Inn in the 1930s, before being converted in the late 1970s.

Sea and sanctuary

Located at the southern end of the O.C., Dana Point is a nature-lovers paradise. With a number of migration routes passing by, whale watching is on order. Dana Wharf (danawharf.com) has a fleet of 12 vessels that often encounter sea lions, blue and grey whales and even the occasional mega-pod of a few thousand dolphins swimming in unison and playing in the wake of the boats.

Exhausted after a day at sea? Pamper yourself at The Ritz Carlton, Laguna Niguel (ritzcarlton.com/lagunaniguel). The hotel is located 150-feet above Salt Creek Beach and offers stunning coastal views. You can take them in while sipping wine on the 180blü patio — a perfect sunset spot — or enjoying a well-deserved yummy meal at Raya, with its Latin-inspired menu of sustainable seafood, local produce and organic meat created by Chef Richard Sandoval. Spend an afternoon walking through the grounds of the hotel, and feeding the rabbits that hop around the property. Use the Ritz's beach butler service to be carted down in a buggy from the resort to the beach below. They will set up chairs and umbrellas, provide recreational equipment, and even build you a sandcastle to enjoy.

Nothing beats a good guidebook. Despite the incredible amount of information available online, there is something comforting about not having to rely on the world of Internet connectivity and power outlets when you are travelling. Here are a few titles worth packing:

Originally written for backpackers and bohemians, Lonely Planet now offers suggested itineraries for more up-scale travellers with their Discover series books. Think boutique hotels and bed and breakfasts versus hostels. The If You Like tips suggest lesser known alternatives to major sites. In the Netherlands for example, if you like the Rijksmuseum, they suggest adding the Groninger Museum or Kroller-Muller Museum to your plans.

The Rough Guides are great for travellers wanting to reduce their carbon footprint. They make a point of offering green alternatives to everything from accommodations to local tour operators. The destination listings offer a good variety of bars, restaurants and attractions.

Where to Go When, by Eyewitness Travel Guides, is for people who are planning their holiday based on when they are able to travel versus having a specific destination in mind. Think teachers on March Break or newlyweds looking for the best honeymoon destination. There are more than 300 seasonal recommendations for destinations that are at their best during different months of the year.

Time Out books offer top 10 lists for culture vultures who want to get beyond the best known highlights. Using a list of recommendations to plan your days is an especially great way of giving a short trip some focus.

Water puts damper on our naval past

Halifax. A reminder of Canada's role in WWII is threatened by the passage of time Floating on the Halifax harbour is a living naval time capsule — a window into one of Canada's great contributions to the Allied cause during the Second World War.

HMCS Sackville is Canada's last corvette and now serves as a floating museum in the harbour's salt-kissed air, generations removed from when it protected merchant ships from German submarines in the North Atlantic. During the summer, the 71-year-old flower-class corvette is berthed at Sackville Landing, where anywhere from 6,000 to 10,000 people stop by to tour the ship, now preserved by the Canadian Naval Memorial Trust.

Sackville has even hosted royalty, as Queen Elizabeth and the Duke of Edinburgh visited the ship during the International Fleet Review in Halifax in June 2010.

Inside the HMCS Sackville visitors are given a glimpse of sailor life.

The corvettes made their reputation shepherding vulnerable merchant ships carrying food and vital supplies to Great Britain through waters infested with German U-boats. Winning the Battle of the Atlantic was vital to the Allies' victory in the Second World War.

Visitors who come aboard Sackville catch a glimpse into those tumultuous times. Several mannequins are propped up at a picnic table to showcase the life of a Canadian sailor.

The ship became Canada's naval memorial in 1985. It's freshwater that is threatening Sackville's preservation and has sparked a multimillion dollar effort to build a permanent structure around the ship. "The real danger is from freshwater — from inside humidity, from rain water that seeps in," says George Borgal. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Tuna Niçoise grows up on the grill

ROSE REISMAN

There's nothing tastier than a Niçoise salad made with freshly seared tuna. The trick to properly searing tuna is to cook it on high heat for the time specified — and no more.

If you're not going to eat immediately, place it in the refrigerator to stop the cooking process, otherwise the tuna will be overcooked.

1. Boil the potatoes until tender, approximately 15 minutes. Drain, cool and dice. Place in a serving bowl. Add the steamed beans, cucumber, tomatoes, onion, olives and dill.

2. To make the dressing, stir the olive oil, lemon juice, anchovies, garlic, mustard, salt and pepper together until well mixed. Pour over the potato mixture. Place three-quarters of the potato mixture on a serving platter, leaving the remainder for garnish.

3. Heat a non-stick grill pan or barbecue to high and grill the tuna for approximately 1 1/2 minutes per side for seared, or until done to your preference, but do not overcook. Place the tuna, either whole or sliced, over the potato mixture and scatter the reserved mixture overtop or along the side.

For unpredictable spring days: Shrimp & Asparagus Gnocchi

The unpredictable nature of spring — balmy one moment, frigid the next — makes us hanker for dishes that reflect the season's maybe-maybe not feel.

And that was the inspiration for this dish, which blends one of the heartiest of winter pastas — potato gnocchi — with asparagus, a light vegetable that has come to represent one of the surest signs of spring.

To add protein, you don't want to use anything as heavy as meat, nor as light as beans

Ingredients

- Two 16- to 18-oz packages gnocchi
- 4 tbsp (1/2 stick) butter
- Zest and juice of 1 lemon
- 1 tsp each salt and ground black pepper
- 2 bunches asparagus, trimmed and cut into 2-inch pieces
- 1 lb peeled, deveined raw shrimp
- 4 oz watercress
- 1/3 cup crumbled Gorgonzola cheese or tofu. Shrimp, which pair so nicely with asparagus anyway, are the perfect choice.

1. Bring a large pot of salted water to a boil. Add the gnocchi and cook according to package directions, then drain and set aside.

2. Meanwhile, in a large skillet over medium heat, melt the butter. Add the lemon zest and cook until the butter begins to get fragrant and just begins to brown. Immediately add the salt, black pepper, asparagus and shrimp. Cook until the asparagus and shrimp are tender and cooked through, about 5 to 6 minutes.

3. Add the gnocchi to the pan and toss to coat and mix. Divide the gnocchi between 6 serving plates, then top each portion with watercress, Gorgonzola and a squeeze of lemon juice.

Lunch. Grilled Shrimp and Watermelon Salad

1. Place shrimp in shallow dish. Pour 1/2 cup (125 ml) Thai chili sauce over shrimp, turning so that all are well coated. Cover and marinate at room temperature for 30 minutes. Reserving sauce from dish, thread shrimp onto 4 skewers.

3. Spray grill with Pam Grilling; heat to medium-high heat. Grill skewers, basting with reserved sauce during first 5 minutes only, until shrimp are opaque, approximately 10 minutes.

4. Meanwhile, in serving bowl, toss watermelon, croutons, tomatoes, basil and feta cheese. In separate bowl, whisk remaining Thai chili sauce, lemon juice, olive oil and pepper.

5. Remove shrimp from skewers. Arrange on top of salad.

Drizzle about 3 tbsp of vinaigrette over salad, tossing gently. Serve with remaining vinaigrette on the side. NEWS CANADA

Paying the bills while curing the ills

Making change. How to impact the world while still keeping cash in your pocket

TalentEgg.ca

You want to make an impact, but you also have school debt, rent and car insurance to pay for, among other expenses. Your parents want you to find a stable job, one that comes with vacation pay and benefits.

The job market is competitive and your priorities seem to be competing with one another as well. When applying for your next job, it doesn't have to be an either/or decision. The application process, when seeking employment, expects students and recent graduates to choose between the for-profit and not-for-profit sector. When applying for jobs, you have to consider your commitments, financial goals and also what your personal goals are.

three and find a career path that fits who you are as opposed to trying to fit into a pre-existing box that may come at the expense of what you want to achieve?

Traditionally, Canadians have ranked corporations as high in profit potential and low on the social impact scale. Although more organizations are incorporating social responsibility within their mandates, the bottom line is still profit.

Not-for-profit organizations rank high on their social impact and relatively low in profit potential, often dependent on grants, donors and volunteers. The line-up for a promotion at an established not-for-profit is long and also requires years of experience.

There are assumptions that students and new grads often make about both sectors, and — whether right or wrong — this influences where you consider applying and also the direction of your career path. Some find their way, and some are left feeling jaded and stuck.

In both sectors, how many people do you know who are not satisfied with what they are doing, but also suggest that they don't have the flexibility to move out of their current role? I can name a few.

If you can't find your place within the two sectors, what you can do is begin thinking beyond the traditional notions of for-profit and not-for-profit and consider the emergence of social enterprises.

The rise of a third sector, the social sector, merges the traditional concepts and has left social entrepreneurs with a desire to not only make a profit, but also incorporate a social mission within their business models. Incubators, conferences and showcases are popping up and may help to spark an idea, or introduce you to a new network of organizations that are working towards both profit and social impact.

Working two summers in a camp setting helped her get another job last summer: site supervisor for the JK/SK before and after school program at an elementary school.

"I'm learning more about different age groups, because my teaching degree focused on Grades 4 to 10," Heather said.

She says she initially searched for camp jobs to beef up her resumé, but she "continued to work for them because it is just so much more fun than sitting in an office all summer."

Even with the pricey additions to the Blue Jays' roster in the off-season, success still comes down to the expected, much-needed production of incumbent power-hitters Jose Bautista and Edwin Encarnacion.

Platform sharing creates siblings under the skin

Driving Force. Engineers later “tune” suspensions to fit each model

drive@metronews.ca

The basis of any vehicle is its platform, but the concept has changed over the years. At one time, it meant the solid frame upon which the body was bolted.

While most trucks are still built this way, the majority of cars, crossovers and SUVs use a unitized construction design that incorporates the body and chassis, and “platform” is used to describe their undercarriage engineering and assembly.

“The platform is modular building blocks, the parts underneath the car that most people don’t typically see,” says Orth Hedrick, director of product planning for Kia Motors America. “The geometry is critical, and it’s designed around the distance between the wheels and all that attaches to the suspension of the car. These components

Other factors

- Common parts across several models can also include engines, transmissions, and interior switches and controls.

are part of the platform.”

Within an automaker’s lineup, two or more vehicles may share the same platform.

This doesn’t mean they’re identical underneath, but that they share common components, such as with Kia’s Forte and upcoming re-designed Soul.

“The suspension could be common between the two, but because (one is) wider, the sheet metal that ‘stitches’ the parts together changes,” Hedrick says.

“Rather than completely redo an entirely new suspension, which is tens of millions of dollars, and it performs the same function on a car that’s relatively the same size, why not use it on the same vehicle?”

parts that are underneath the car, your costs go down, and you can spend the money in exterior and interior (design) and features,” Hedrick adds.

The cost isn’t just in the parts themselves, but in initially creating them, since many suspension components are stamped out in enormous, expensive dies, or welded together by robots. If a part can be used over several models, it reduces the cost of creating a die or adding more robots to the assembly line to make individual parts for each vehicle line.

Once the suspension is designed, engineers will also “tune” it to each model, creating the specific ride and handling characteristics that drivers will expect from it. A luxury car will have softer springs and rubber bushings to give it a smoother, more comfortable ride, while a sportier model will have stiffer ones to create its more muscular characteristics.

BMW reveals a new signature sound, but it’s not for every automaker out there

AUTO PILOT
Mike Goetz
drive@metronews.ca

Through the years many sounds have been associated with, and emanated from, automobiles.

To cite a few: the howl of an engine in anger; the bark of an unrestricted exhaust; the screech of tires desperately trying to find grip; the cursing and horn blowing induced by having to share the road with moronic motorists; the gluck-gluck of a kid throwing up in her child seat.

One of the newer auto-

BMW recently switched up its “double gong” audio logo to a new one characterized as a “dynamic melody.” Pictured is BMW’s X4 Concept. CONTRIBUTED motive sounds is the “sound trademark.” A lot of these signature sounds typically end a radio or TV spot, like those quick electronic notes that say “Intel.” They’re an audio equivalent of a visual logo, if you will.

On the automotive scene, BMW has been the most active “audio logo” practitioner. Its “double gong” logo sound has been around for 14 years. But a couple of weeks ago, BMW revealed a new audio calling card destined to replace the double-gong.

I’ve listened to this new sound several times and find it hard to describe.

This is how a BMW press release describes it: “Reverse technology is used to play sound elements forward and backwards in a way that symbolizes flexible mobility. The melody is introduced by a rising, resonant sound and underscored by two distinctive bass tones that form the sound logo’s melodic and rhythmic basis. The sounds build toward a shimmering, sophisticated finish. This combination of different elements represents the joy of progress, of dynamism, and Sheer Driving Pleasure.”

The description begs two pertinent questions... “Huh?”

And, “You can accomplish all that (whatever that is) in less than two seconds of sound?”

Frankly, I prefer the old double-gong and/or Audi’s audio logo, which is comprised of a couple of quick and amped up “heart beats.”

A few years ago Mercedes-Benz tried a “choir boy” sound logo, then dropped it and never replaced it.

Harley-Davidson tried for years to trademark the sound of its V-twin engines, but eventually gave up after deciding it wasn’t worth spending more money with no end in sight.

So it doesn’t seem to be for everyone. I don’t foresee a time when all automakers will have an audio logo, but you never know.

Apparently note sequences work well as audio logos because once they become familiar, you only have to hear a couple of the notes before your brain wants/needs to finish the sequence. Like McDonald’s “Bah dah bah bah bah ... I’m loving it.”

Employers will go out of their way to make life easy for you over the next 24 hours — if they think that is what you need and desire. If you want help, just ask for it.

Leo

July 24 - Aug. 23

Let your mind roam wherever it wants to and don't be afraid to think, say and do things that some other people might not approve of. You're at your best when rocking the boat.

Virgo

Aug. 24 - Sept. 23

Sometimes it is better to tell a friend a painful truth than a comfortable lie and that is the situation you are in at the moment. Let them know how you see their situation. They need your clear-headed input.

Libra

Sept. 24 - Oct. 23

You must make an effort to communicate with loved ones. Make sure they know exactly what you are thinking. Minor disputes can easily be resolved over the next 24 hours.

Scorpio

Oct. 24 - Nov. 22

Whatever you are currently working on, you must not try to push ahead too fast. Take it a step at a time, even if your progress seems to be slow. You'll get there in the end.

Sagittarius

Nov. 23 - Dec. 21

Say what you mean today and don't worry that it might hurt someone's feelings. It's your feelings that count and if the price of happiness is admitting that you no longer get on with someone then so be it.

Capricorn

Dec. 22 - Jan. 20

You know you are right about something but you can't find the evidence that will prove it. How frustrating. Maybe it's because you are looking too hard. Maybe you should back off a little, for now.

Aquarius

Jan. 21 - Feb. 19

You may have high standards but not everyone has what it takes to live up to them. And why should they anyway if they don't share your measuring stick? It takes all sorts to make a world.

Pisces

Feb. 20 - March 20

Your current task may seem too big for you but the planets indicate you have what it takes to push through. Today's new moon will boost your self-belief. SALLY BROMPTON
